

A photograph of a stone archway, likely a ruin, with the sun shining through a central opening. The sun is positioned directly behind the arch, creating a bright lens flare that radiates across the scene. The sky is blue with scattered white clouds. The stone structure is dark and textured, with a smaller, irregular opening visible to the right of the main arch.

Licht- Blicke

Irene und Norbert
Wickbold

Fotos aus dreizehn Jahren

